

Hispanic Mother-Daughter Program

The Hispanic Mother-Daughter Program (HMDP) is an early-outreach middle and high school program designed to increase the number of first-generation Arizona students who are qualified and prepared to enroll at Arizona State University through direct family involvement. The Hispanic Mother-Daughter Program was originally designed to serve Hispanic mothers and their daughters. Although the program has retained this name, neither gender nor ethnicity will be a consideration as participants are chosen for the program. All first-generation 7th, 8th, or 9th grade students and their parents/guardians are encouraged to apply to the program during the recruitment cycle.

Please look at our website for more information on benefits and program commitment.
